Let's Start!

Writing Spot: Excuse me. Can you complete a feedback form please?

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information about travel and vacations in social situations.

Ask your partner:

- What are feedback forms used for?
- How often do you complete customer feedback forms?

Can Do Statements

- I can complete a feedback form.
- I can share personal information.
- I can write about intentions and plans.

Let's Explore!

Listen to Aunt Nelly and Vanessa talk about the Customer Feedback Form. Do they mind doing it?

* "Mind" means do you care or are you bothered?

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Aunt Nelly: We have to complete a customer feedback form before we leave. Here's a pen.
- Vanessa: No problem. I really enjoyed the Giovanelli Factory tour. Plus, the chocolate cookie recipe on the back of the form was a nice touch!
- Aunt Nelly: Yes, you and I love sweet things. The employees were so friendly too.
- Vanessa: Yep. Remember, that one lady helped you down the stairs. That was kind of her.
- Aunt Nelly: Absolutely! I also thought the gift shop was nicely organized, and the variety of chocolates ... wow! The prices were good but the lineup at the cashier was terrible. They need more cashiers in the gift shop.
- Vanessa: I agree. I liked the taste tests. Caramel chocolate swirl was my favorite.
- Aunt Nelly: I prefer to eat dark chocolate.
- Vanessa: I'm also going to write an additional note in the comment section. It says I plan to return with my friends from Cambridge.
- Aunt Nelly: Make sure you mention the lineup. Oh, you forgot your name on the top.
- Vanessa: Oops. They only want my first name. They also ask for my city and my e-mail address. What do you think?
- Aunt Nelly: They plan to send you offers and information in the future. Do you mind?
- Vanessa: Not at all. I can't say no to chocolate!

Let's Practice!

Learning Points

Be Going to for Intentions and Decisions

The structure be going to is a way of talking about the future. It is often used for future intentions and decisions. The verb to be is formed in the usual way, followed by going to, which does not change, and then a verb.

Interrogative	Are you going to the movie with us? Are they going to write a feedback form?
Affirmative	I'm going to the movies. They are going to write a feedback form.

Examples:

- I'm going to start an English course next week.
- Are you going to take the subway this afternoon?
- He is going to give a presentation.
